AYODHYA - MYTHOLOGY

Most people hear about Ayodhya for the first time as a central setting in the Hindu epic of the Ramayana. It is the city of the king Dashratha and the capital of the kingdom of Kosaladesh. As "prosperous as paradise" itself (Atharvaveda), the city—one of the sapta puris, or seven sacred cities of ancient India (Skandapurana)—is also known to be the site of Ram Janmabhoomi, the land where Prince Ram was born and brought up, the city that wept when he was sent away to exile, and the kingdom that celebrated his joyous return 14 years later. The name 'Ayodhya' comes from King Ayudh, who is believed to have been the first of the forefathers of Shree Ram. The Ramayana states that the city, which lies on the right bank of the river Saryu, was founded by the sage Manu, who had received it from Lord Vishnu. It was ruled by the Surya dynasty of the Ikshvakus. Also known as Saket up till a certain point in history, Ayodhya came to be known by its present name eventually. The temple to Nageshwarnath, the only one to Shiva in Ram's city, alone survived till the time of Chandragupta Vikramaditya (376-415 C E) and helped him locate Ayodhya.

CONNECT TO TEMPLES

Whether you are a religious traveller or a spiritual seeker, visiting sacred destinations occasionally helps balance your thoughts and emotions, providing much-needed peace and calm. With the consecration ceremony of the majestic Ram Mandir in Ayodhya around the corner, it is the best time to explore the best places to visit in the city.

While the Ram temple is symbolic of Ayodhya's glory, the city is home to numerous other temples and spots, making it one of the best places to visit in India. From intriguing attractions to popular delicacies, Travel with RV is here to help you plan your Ayodhya itinerary.

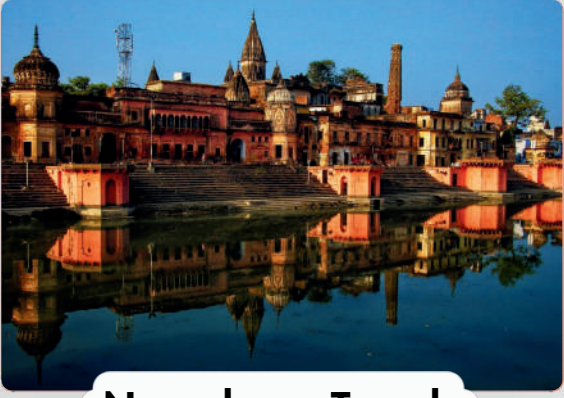

Temple Town - Narrative

Ram Ki Paidi

This mesmerising view from the banks of the Saryu River can be enjoyed best from the Ram ki Pairi ghat. Technically a flight of steps on the Naya Ghat, the divine charm of Ayodhya washes over the devotees taking a dip in the holy waters. The story goes that one day Lakshmana wished to embark on a pilgrimage, so Shree Ram showed him the lila on the banks of the Saryu. He said that pilgrims arrive here every day before sunrise to take a dip, and that taking a bath in the river would be akin to bathing in all the pilgrimages. Best time to view ghat is during sunrise and sunset.

Nageshwar Temple

This temple is at Ram Ki Paidi in Ayodhya. The temple of Nageshwarnath is said to have been established by Kush, the son of Rama. Legend is that Kush lost his armlet, while bathing in the Saryu, which was picked up by a Nag-Kanya, who fell in love with him. As she was a devotee of Shiva, Kush erected this temple for her. The present temple was built in 1750 by the minister of Safdar Jung, named Naval Rai. The festival of Shivratri is celebrated here in a big way, and Shiv Barat procession is taken out during these celebrations which is particularly significant.

Hanuman Garhi

Hanuman Garhi temple complex has to be one of the most famous face of this holy city. Although it is entirely a land of temples but this particular place of worship stands out. Visiting this temple is an experience in itself since you will be crossing a variety of colourful shops and narrow lanes and climb 70 steps. This is the place where lord hanuman used to stay while protecting Ayodhya. The presiding idol of the lord is in the form of an infant where he is seated on the lap of Mata Anjani.

Evening Saryu Aarti

People and devotees visiting Ayodhya make it a point to take a holy dip in the river of Saryu on the holy Saryu Ghat. This is a very clean ghat and offers eternal peace to any body visiting. One can be a part of the holy aarti, go on soulful boat rides and watch the amazing beauty of this cultural centre unfold in front of your eyes. Be a part of the spectacular representation of Hindu culture in its full glory at this ghat. This truly is a one of a kind ghat and a must visit.

Temple Town - Narrative

॥जय श्रीराम॥

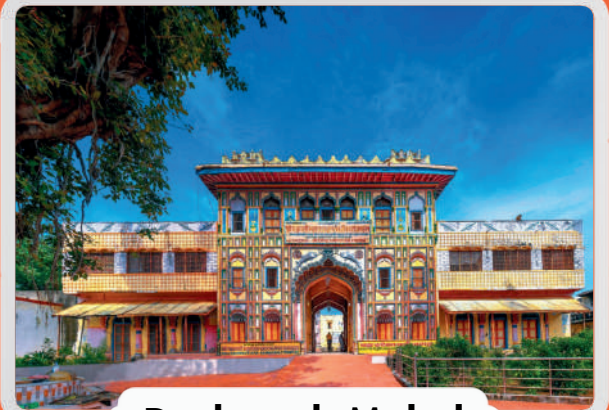

Ram Mandir (Janmabhoomi)

Shri Ram Janmbhoomi Teerth Kshetra Trust enlists the features of the Ayodhya Ram temple - "The three-storied Ram Mandir is built in the traditional Nagar style and has a length (east-west) of 380 feet, a width of 250 feet, and a height of 161 feet. Each floor of the temple is 20 feet tall. It has a total of 392 pillars and 44 doors. In the main sanctum sanctorum, there is the idol of Shri Ram Lalla and on the first floor, there will be a Shri Ram Darbar."

Located at the site of King Dasharatha's palace, it is where Shree Ram and his siblings spent their childhood and teenage years. Recitation from the scriptures and soothing bhajans can be heard in its peaceful interiors and courtyard. The temple houses idols of Ram and Sita and brothers Lakshmana, Bharata and Shatrughna. The bhavan is also referred to as Bada Asthan and Badi Jagah. Its somnolence is broken during the festivities of Ram Vivah, Deepavali, Shravan Mela, Chaitra Ramnavami and Kartik Mela.

Dasharath Mahal

Kanak Bhawan

Kanak Mahal was gifted by Raja Dashratha's queen Kaikeyi, for her daughter-in-law Sita, wife of Dashratha's eldest son Ram. King Vikramaditya rebuilt it after it was damaged. Kanak Bhawan was once again rebuilt by Rani Vrishbhanu Kunwari. Temple that you see today is maintained by the Tikamgarh and Orchha royals who are its trustees. The sanctum is home to statues of Shree Ram and Goddess Sita in Kanak Bhawan which lies northeast of the Ram Janmabhoomi site. One of the famous parikramas undertaken by devotees here is the Antargrahi parikarma.

Temple Town - Narrative

Raja Dasharatha Samadhi Situated approximately 15 kilometres away from the iconic Ram Janmabhoomi, the Raja Dasharatha Samadhi Sthal in Ayodhya. According to the successor of the Samadhi Sthal, Sandeep Das Maharaj, 'charan paduka' of all four brothers, Pind Vedi, Guru Vashishtha's footprints, and ancient historical weapons are present here and have remarkably remained free from rust to this day. The statues of King Dasharatha, Bharat, Shatrughna and Guru Vashishtha are also present at this sacred place.

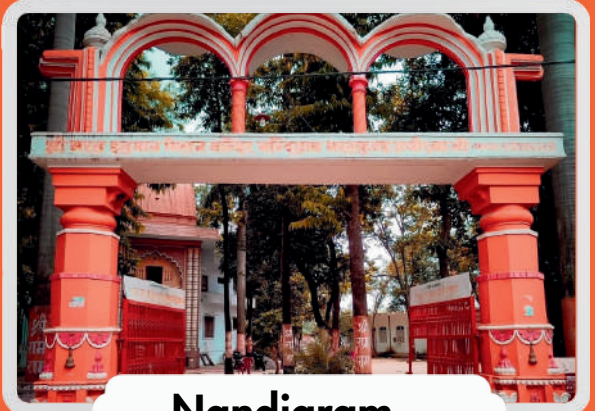

Samadhi Sthal

Suraj Kund

Suraj Kund where locals believed the Sun God resides when he comes to earth. Last time Surya Dev did that is when he along with other devatas came to attend the coronation of Shri Ram, the king of Ayodhya. According to legend, one day a Suryavanshi King came here to hunt & decided to reside at this place permanently. The king was suffering from leprosy, but was cured after a dip in the kund. King ordered the construction of a temple dedicated to Sun God. Devotees take a dip in the kund Sunday and pray to the Sun God to get rid of their diseases.

Ayodhya to Nandigram is approximately 22 Km from south of Ayodhya, hold a unique place in Hindu mythology. This is where Bharat, one of the Lord Rama's brother, ruled Ayodhya during Lord Rama's 14 Year exile in the forest. The scriptures describes Nandigram as a land blessed with numerous divine stories and holy spot that continue to captivate the hearts of pilgrims. Hanuman's visit to Nandigram on his journey to retrieve the Sanjeevani Mountain provides another remarkable chapter.

Nandigram

Guptar Ghat

Situated on the banks of River Saryu, Guptar Ghat holds immense religious significance. According to legend, this was the place where Lord Rama had taken his last dip (jal samadhi) to leave the earth and go back to his original abode 'Vaikunta'. It is a popular belief among devotees that taking a dip in the Saryu river on this ghat will wash away their sins and relieve them from worldly worries. The ghat resounds with the chants of Lord Rama's name as devotees and priests sing hymns in his praises.

Celebration in Ayodhya

Ayodhya Deepotsav

The Ayodhya Deepotsav, started in 2017, is probably the grandest celebration one will witness not just in the city but in the whole country. On the occasion of Deepawali, devotees—both residents and tourists—erupt in a joyous celebration.

Kartik Poornima

On the occasion of Kartik Poornima, the full-moon day of the holy month of Kartik in the Hindu calendar, the Saryu comes alive with earthen lamps and offerings made by devotees pouring in from far and wide.

Ram Navami

This is observed on the ninth day of Chaitra Navratri in the month of April, and draws hordes of devotees from far and wide to Ayodhya. Ram Navami, which marks the birth of Ram as the prince of Ayodhya.

Ramayan Mela

The fair is organised on the banks of the Saryu, in the Ramkatha Park, on Ram Vivah—the day marking the wedding of Shree Ram and Sitaji. For four days, the city hums with the sights and sounds of folk dance, drama.

Shravan Jhula Mela

The Shravan Jhula Mela is in line with the popular Indian tradition of jhula daalna, or setting up a swing. As a newly-wed bride, Sitaji is said to have chosen to visit Mani Parvat instead of her maternal house in Janakpur, to celebrate Shravan. The 15-day fair is generally held during the months of July-August

Walks & Parikramas

Mokshdayni Walk >

This heritage walk takes you through narrow alleys dotted with traditional akhadas and introduces you to the many temples tucked away in the small nooks and crannies of Ayodhya. The walk serves as a great way to explore the picturesque ghats of the sacred town and acquaint yourself with the unparalleled monumental and spiritual heritage of Ayodhya. Offered as part of a day trip, the walk allows you to soak in the serenity of life lived by the Saryu. The walk not only introduces visitors with the mystic tales surrounding the temple town of Ayodhya but also takes them to Ghats.

Antargrahi Parikrama >

This is the shortest parikrama in Ayodhya and needs to be completed within a day. The devotees begin this parikrama by taking a holy dip in the waters of the river Saryu. The Nageshwarnath Temple is the commencing point of the Antargrahi Parikrama, after which the devotees pass through the Ram Ghat, Sita Kund, Mani Parvat and Brahma Kund. The parikrama ends at the Kanak Bhawan, where the devotees seek blessings from Shree Ram and Goddess Sita.

Visiting Places

- CHAKRATIRTH
- VYAAS GADDI
- HANUMAN GARHI
- DADHICHI KUND
- LALITHA DEVI TEMPLE
- DASAASHWAMEDHA GHAT

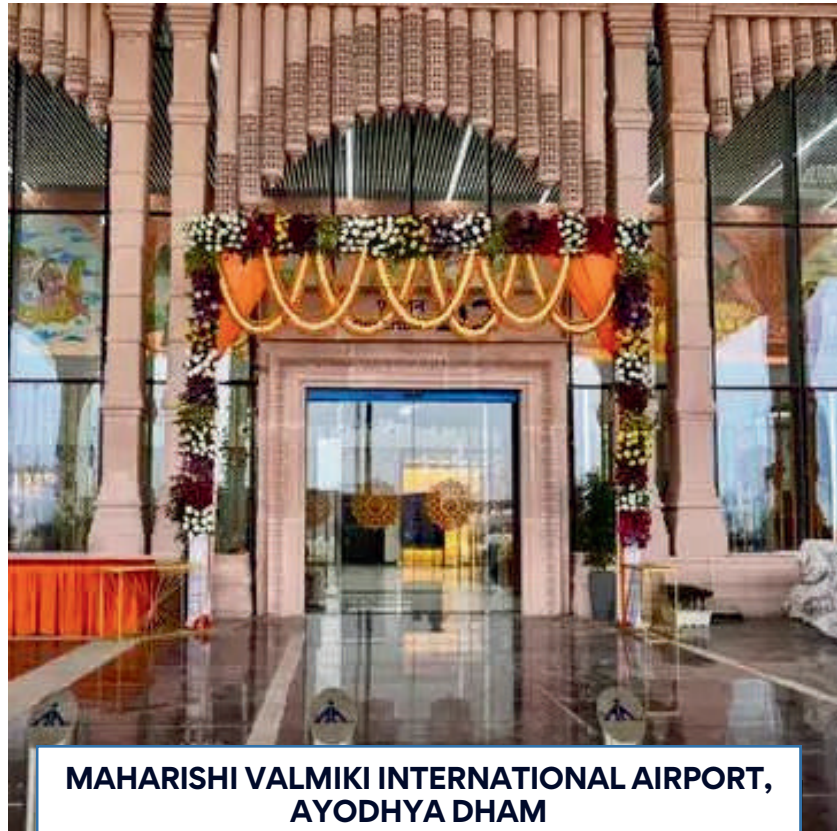

While it is mentioned in Sri Devi Bhagwat that Chakrtirth and Pushkar are the best pilgrimage centres, devouts believe that the journey to Badrinath and Kedarnath is completed only after completing the journey to Naimisharanya.

NAIMISHARANYA

One such pilgrimage site is Naimisharanya in Sitapur district of Uttar Pradesh, whose glory is described in the Puranas. It is said that Shaunak Rishi went to Lord Brahma to pacify the thirst of knowledge. Lord Brahma gave him a 'Chakra' (disk), asked him to keep rotating it and said that wherever the rim of the chakra falls, consider it as a holy place and establish an ashram there. Many other sages along with sage Shaunak left for this purpose. Finally, on the banks of Gomti river, the rim of the chakra fell and got absorbed by the land. Since then, this place became popular as 'Naimisharanya'. According to legend, the name of Naimisharanya is the abnormality of Nimisha, which means the splendour of the eye. During the Vedic period, it was known as a major education center. According to legendary belief, Naimisharanya was the center of learning of 88,000 sages.

Naimisharanya is situated about 220 Km from Ayodhya & 95 km by road from Lucknow.
